PREFACE.

THE want of an extenſive and well-digeſted bibliographical work on Theology and kindred ſubjects has long been felt as a great inconvenience both by authors and readers. Owing to this deficiency in our literature, authors are deprived of much aſſiſtance which they would otherwiſe obtain in perfecting their works, and readers have often to be content with ſuperficial books when ſuch a guide would at once direct them to the beſt ſources of information.

In the "Cyclopædia Bibliographica" an attempt is made to ſupply this deſideratum. It is formed on a plan calculated to make known the productions of former ages, as well as thoſe of the preſent time, in the eaſieſt as well as the moſt exact manner, the reſult of many years' ſtudy of the beſt bibliographical ſyſtems and of the wants of literary men.

Many errors have been introduced into bibliographical works, owing to their being compiled from ſecond-hand ſources, and not from an actual inſpection of the books deſcribed. The greater part of the preſent work is the reſult of a careful inſpection, often leaf by leaf, of the books contained in the Metropolitan Library, founded by the compiler in January 1840, in order to ſupply a want greatly felt for an inſtitution, where, for a ſmall annual ſubſcription, members could obtain at their own reſidences the uſe of books of a ſuperior order, ancient as well as modern, eſpecially in Theology, and in the various languages,—an inſtitution which continues to be of eſſential uſe in promoting the ſtudy of ſacred literature. The object for which the Library was formed, and the "Cyclopædia Bibliographica" publiſhed, is the ſame; the books which are requiſite for the one are exactly thoſe which ought to be deſcribed in the other. It is, therefore, claimed as a peculiar advantage of the preſent work, that it is founded on an exiſting library, and thus poſſeſſes every ſecurity for correctneſs; while it is not ſo peculiarly ſo, but that other books, not yet in the Library, are added, in order that it may have that completeneſs which may render it a uſeful guide in all libraries. Such additions are diſtinguiſhed by an aſteriſk at the end of the date or title, or by their being placed in the form of notes as "Other works." For theſe the ſame degree of accuracy is not claimed, although, in general, they are given from a careful inſpection of copies in other libraries.

Although Theology is the chief ſubject of the preſent work—and for ſome conſiderations it might have ſeemed adviſable that it had been confined entirely to that—yet other conſiderations have weighed greatly in favour of embracing in the ſame publication, not only cognate ſubjects, but, in a greater or leſs degree, moſt branches of human knowledge. Theology, properly conſidered, extends over all departments of human purſuit, and receives illuſtration and confirmation from all ſources of information. The well-furniſhed divine requires, quite as much as the poet deſcribed in "Raſſelas," to be poſſeſſed of univerſal knowledge. It may alſo be obſerved, that there are few really great men who have not at ſome time had their attention directed to the ſubject of deepeſt intereſt to man, and left ſome work on Theology. Lord Bacon, Milton, Sir Iſaac Newton, Locke, may be inſtanced in confirmation of this, the enumeration of whoſe works cannot be made without including moſt departments of knowledge.

The "Cyclopædia Bibliographica," therefore, contains ſelections of the beſt and moſt uſeful books in various branches of literature, while it is chiefly occupied with Theology and cognate ſubjects, including Biblical criticiſm, commentaries, ſermons, diſſertations, and other illuſtrations of the books, chapters, and verſes of Holy Scripture; the conſtitution, government, diſcipline, and liturgies of the Chriſtian Church; doctrinal, practical, and polemical divinity; eccleſiaſtical hiſtory and biography; the complete works of the Fathers of the Church and other divines, ancient and modern; beſt editions. It has been requiſite, however, even on the ſcale adopted, to obſerve a principle of ſelection, otherwiſe the work would have run beyond reaſonable bounds; yet it is hoped that nearly all the beſt books are introduced on all uſeful topics.

The name of each Author is accompanied by a ſhort, but as comprehenſive as poſſible, BIOGRAPHICAL AND CHARACTERISTIC NOTICE, ſo far as can be aſcertained from authentic ſources. In this, regard has chiefly been had to his country, his education, the ſtation he occupied in ſociety, the party he attached himſelf to, the religious principles he profeſſed, and other particulars likely to have given a bias to his opinions; and as it is deſirable to know in what eſtimation an author and his writings have been held, a brief character has generally been ſubjoined, formed from a careful inveſtigation of what has been delivered by the moſt impartial and able writers, often in their own words, but with ſuch modifications as a due regard to exact appreciation ſeemed to require. Theſe Biographical Sketches, ſhort as they are, have not been given without much previous labour and reſearch. Such as have been found in the uſual biographical dictionaries have been carefully compiled from a compariſon of various authorities. But the great difficulty has been to furniſh information reſpecting authors whoſe names have not found their way into dictionaries. Many authors of moſt important works have paſſed their lives in ſuch obſcurity, or have had ſo few incidents recorded of their hiſtory, that, in the abſence of anything likely to intereſt the general reader, their names have been paſſed over by biographers; yet readers of their books will always be glad to know ſomething about them. Such neglected biographies have been diligently ſought out for the preſent work. Many have been ſearched for in vain; but notices, more or leſs complete, of ſeveral hundred important authors will be found in the preſent work, given for the firſt time. As a remarkable inſtance of this deficiency in biographical information, the name of the founder of the Bampton Lecture may be quoted, who, although not an author himſelf, has originated one of the moſt valuable ſeries of defences of Chriſtianity; the ſcanty notice given of him here was only found, after a long ſearch, in that ſtorehouſe of Engliſh biography, the "Gentleman's Magazine."

Much time has been occupied in aſcertaining the Authors of Anonymous Works, and a great many of theſe will be found ranged under their names; where the ſearch has failed, ſuch works have been placed under the moſt prominent word of the title.

The notice of each author is followed by the FULL TITLES OF ALL OR THE MOST IMPORTANT OF HIS WORKS, with critical notices where neceſſary. The variations of Editions are ſpecified, and thoſe that are conſidered the beſt are indicated. In all caſes where more than one ſubject is treated of under a general title, often very deceptive, or giving but a very imperfect idea of the ſubjects treated on, the whole are enumerated; ſo minutely is this done, that the methods of the beſt authors in treating their ſubjects are exhibited, and in books of bibliographical intereſt, from their rarity, expenſiveneſs, or other cauſes, the analyſis given will ſerve as an exact collation. No tables of contents have been followed, but a careful examination has been made in order to exhibit the moſt eſſential topics of every book, and give a full analytical view of the ſubjects on which each author has written. It muſt not, however, be expected that every book publiſhed by every author whoſe name is introduced is intended to be enumerated; that would have extended the work much beyond the limits preſcribed; yet much care has been taken to furniſh complete liſts of all the writings of ſome important authors, ſuch as Richard Baxter and Biſhop Patrick; and with regard to nearly all authors whoſe works have been publiſhed in a complete collection, every book in each volume, as well as the minute contents with references to the pages, has been given. Occaſionally the ſize and date of a ſeparately publiſhed edition of ſome of the books in ſuch collected works have been placed within brackets; but this has in general been done only when they happened to be in the Metropolitan Library,—and this, mainly as a ſpecimen of a method which might be carried out with advantage.

Important Pamphlets have not been neglected; great facility has been obtained in attending to them from the rich and extenſive collection contained in the Metropolitan Library formed from various libraries, and, in particular, containing that made by Dr. Flexman, an indefatigable collector of uſeful tracts. The value of ſuch ſmaller works, judiciouſly ſelected, is generally recogniſed. They often illuſtrate intereſting points not touched upon in larger books: in hiſtory they are often of great conſequence. "The writers of them," ſays Dr. Johnſon, "frequently have opportunities of enquiring from living witneſſes, and of copying their repreſentations from the life, and preſerve a multitude of particular incidents, which are forgotten in a ſhort time, or omitted in formal relations, and yet afford light in ſome of the darkeſt ſcenes of ſtate." He compares the impreſſion produced on the mind of him who ſhall conſult theſe tracts, and of another that refers merely to formal hiſtorians, to the difference between him who hears of a victory and him who ſees the battle. To diſtinguiſh pamphlets, the number of pages they contain is generally inſerted.

It will be found to be no unimportant feature of this work, that the books contained in the COLLECTED PUBLICATIONS of early and middle-age writers, and others, are enumerated at length;—ſuch as the Bibliotheca Patrum of De la Bigne, of Deſpont and Gallandius, the Bollandine Acta Sanctorum, the collections of Combefis, Routh, Cotelerius, Martene and Durand, D'Achery, Mabillon, Muratori, Tartini, Caniſius, Aſſemani, Ugolini, Biſhop Gibſon, Wharton, Gale and Fell, Twyſden, the Boyle, Moyer, Bampton, Hulſean, and Warburtonian Lectures, with numerous other collections; each book being alſo placed under the name of the author, with a reference to the collection, the volume, and the page where it may be found. In the enumeration of the edition of the Councils of the Church edited by Coletus, not only the dates of all the Councils may be aſcertained, but a complete liſt of the Popes of Rome will be found, with the dates of their aſcent to the Papal chair. In that of Le Quien's Oriens Chriſtianus will be found the names of the Eaſtern dioceſes; and many incidental advantages will be derived from the full development now given to the contents of books.

Such is a brief outline of what has been attempted in the volume now publiſhed of the "Cyclopædia Bibliographica." It will be perceived that the plan embraces objects which have never yet been attempted on a complete ſcale in any bibliographical work, and that it is calculated to develope the valuable contents of numerous volumes, which for want of ſuch liſts are of comparatively little uſe to the ſtudent.

In the proſecution of theſe labours, now of nearly ten years' duration, occupying every hour that could be ſpared from a laborious occupation or neceſſary reſt, much encouragement has been derived from the approbation given to the plan, and the ſolicitude evinced for its being carried out, by ſome of the moſt eminent Authors of the preſent day. To the Subſcribers—a liſt of whom is ſubjoined—the beſt acknowledgments are due, for no pecuniary advantages over thoſe who may purchaſe the completed work have been offered to them, and they have given their names ſolely to promote a work which they conſidered to be worthy of encouragement. Without ſuch patronage it would not have appeared; for the advantages of bibliographical ſcience are not yet to any great extent either underſtood or appreciated in this country,—undoubtedly they are not ſo in quarters where ſuch would be moſt expected. To the Literary Journals thanks are particularly due; the numerous notices which have appeared during the progreſs of the publication have been of the moſt generous and favourable deſcription. The various criticiſms and ſuggeſtions contained in thoſe notices have been duly appreciated and attended to. The compiler has to acknowledge aſſiſtance during the progreſs of the work from various gentlemen, particularly from the Rev. John Rogers Pitman, the Rev. J. Twycroſs, and the Rev. W. Anderſon. To Guſtave Maſſon, Eſq., he is indebted for the abſtracts of the contents of the "Edinburgh Review," the "Quarterly Review," and the "Bibliothèques" of Le Clerc; alſo for many of the notices of French authors, which will be found to exhibit that gentleman's intimate knowledge of the literature of his country. The Rev. A. Löwy, one of the miniſters of the Weſt London Synagogue, has enriched the work with the articles on Buxtorf's Rabbinical Bible (Col. 286), on Jarchi, Jonathan Ben Uzziel, Maimonides, Miſchna, Onkelos, Talmud, Targum, and, in the Appendix, Mendelſſohn. To the perſevering induſtry of his daughter the compiler is indebted for the analyſis of the ſermons; with ſuch care has this willing ſervice been rendered, that many errors in the original works have been diſcovered and ſilently corrected; and although it is very poſſible that others may yet remain which have not been noticed, it is hoped that as much accuracy has been reached as is attainable where ſo many numerals occur. The ſpace occupied by the ſermons may to ſome appear too large; but the plan of the work could not otherwiſe have been fully carried out, and it is believed that this will not be found to be the leaſt uſeful part of the book. Even in the times of Lord Bacon and Biſhop Wilkins, the publiſhed ſermons that had then appeared formed an important branch of theological ſtudy. "It is the common opinion," ſays Biſhop Wilkins, "that amongſt all ſuch kinds of works our Engliſh ſermons are moſt elaborate and uſeful. It was the judgment of a very learned man (Lord Bacon), that if the choice and beſt obſervations which have been made diſperſedly in our Engliſh ſermons had been ſet down in a continuance, it would be the beſt work in divinity that hath been written ſince the Apoſtles' time."

The labour of correcting the preſs—no eaſy matter in a work of this nature—has been rendered comparatively light by the admirable manner in which it has paſſed through the accurate preſs of Mr. Barclay.

The Volume of Subjects is preparing for publication, for which Subſcribers' names will be received by the publiſher. It will contain a ſcientific as well as alphabetical arrangement of ſubjects, by which a ready reference may be made to books, treatiſes, ſermons, and diſſertations, on nearly all heads of divinity; the books, chapters, and verſes of Holy Scripture; the feſtivals, faſts, &c., obſerved throughout the year; and uſeful topics in literature, philoſophy, and hiſtory, on a more complete ſyſtem than has yet been attempted in any language, forming an index to the contents of all ſimilar libraries, both public and private, and a cyclopædia of the ſources of information and diſcuſſion in theology, and, to a great extent, of univerſal knowledge. It will embrace the whole of the matter contained in the Volume of Authors, arranged under heads or common-places in ſcientific order, with an alphabetical index, by which any topic may be eaſily referred to, and all authors of any authority who have written on it at once exhibited, with the titles of their works, treatiſes, diſſertations, or ſermons, and an indication of the volumes and pages where they may be found. Thus a great choice of authors will be preſented to the reader, who will always be aſſiſted in his choice by a reference to the Volume of Authors, where he will find accounts ſufficiently ample to guide his ſelection. It is no uncommon thing for an author in writing his preface to acknowledge having only heard, after the reſult of his labours had been printed, of the exiſtence of ſome important book, which, if previouſly ſeen, would have enabled him to produce a better work. The "Cyclopædia Bibliographica" propoſes to remedy this evil; and it is hoped that it will be the means of promoting the advancement of knowledge, enabling each author to make a ſtep in advance of what has already been accompliſhed. It is a remark of Cicero, that thoſe who know not what has been previouſly written on a ſubject always remain in a ſtate of childhood. And a late writer has well ſaid,—"He that will be ſo original as to ſcorn to borrow from others, may indeed acquire the wiſdom of age, but he throws away the wiſdom of ages. In this world that originality is ſufficiently original, which having firſt acquired the knowledge and practice of others, improves on them,—adds one ſtory to the original edifice."

CRITICAL NOTICES OF THE CYCLOPÆDIA BIBLIOGRAPHICA.

"A work of considerable promise and immense research. It is a catalogue of theological writers, with a brief account of their works. A 'Cave,' modern as well as ancient; a 'Watt,' English and foreign. It seems to be most rich and explicit in modern literature."—Christian Remembrancer.

"A well-planned and well-executed catalogue raisonnée of works in theology and general literature, both rare and readily procurable."—Spectator.

"We should be glad to say a good deal more .... from the great merit of the compilation. It must, however, be examined to be duly appreciated. A good example of its utility happens to lie open before us. It is the article headed by the name of Dr. Thomas Arnold of Rugby. First are given some concise biographical notes. Then his 'History of Rome' (and the period embraced by each of the three volumes), and his other historical works are described; then his volumes of Sermons, and the texts and subjects of each Sermon; and, lastly, his volume of miscellaneous works, and all the subjects it embraces. This article occupies four columns; that on the works of St. Augustine takes ten. Authors comprised in collections are duly referred to, which supplies a great defect in most library catalogues. The First Volume of the work will comprise the arrangement of authors in alphabet; the Second, a recasting of the same information under heads or common-places. It is obvious how useful such a work will be in all other extensive libraries, besides that from which it is formed; and that the new, but well-conceived title of a Bibliographical Cyclopædia will be truly borne out."—Gentleman's Magazine.

"An undertaking, the appearance of which we hail with the liveliest satisfaction. The aid which a work like this will afford to theological students and writers, by at once enabling them to find what has already been produced on any subject to which their attention may be turned, cannot be too highly estimated; and those who have ever felt the need of such assistance, will do great wrong to themselves if they fail to afford this very arduous enterprise the encouragement to which it is so abundantly entitled. A slight inspection will suffice to evince the absolute utility and high value of the first or alphabetical catalogue. The name of each author is accompanied by a short biographical and characteristic notice, so far as can be ascertained from authentic sources. These notices have, though concise, been evidently prepared with the most conscientious care. The full titles of the works are then given; and in all cases where more than one subject is treated of in a volume, the whole are enumerated. Critical notices of the works are sometimes furnished. The variation of editions is noticed, and those considered the best are indicated."—Kitto's Journal of Sacred Literature.

"The first number of a 'Cyclopædia Bibliographica,' projected by Mr. Darling, is before us. It is intended to be a catalogue raisonnée of authors chiefly, though not exclusively, on theological and historical subjects. The author's name, when known, is followed by a short notice of him, and a catalogue of all his known works, the best editions and the inferior ones being discriminated. Well done, such a work will be invaluable, and the first number appears to be elaborately and accurately got up. We wish it all success."—Guardian.

"The present Number seems carefully got up, and peculiarly worthy the attention of the ecclesiastical student."—Daily News.

"We sincerely regret that our limits will not permit us to give more than a most meagre and brief outline of this noble work projected by Mr. Darling; indeed, it may be considered a national work, and well deserves the support of all literary men, but especially of divinity students. It is, perhaps, not generally known that Mr. Darling's Clerical Library is one of the most extensive and select in the kingdom; and it has this advantage over the British Museum, that books of reference in divinity, history, biography, and also sermons, may be borrowed for a limited time, and consulted at home in the quiet leisure of one's own study. This magnificent work will exhibit a classified arrangement of the treatises and dissertations contained in books, as well as of the books, generally, themselves: it will be the most complete Catalogue that has ever been published; and it will become indispensable to the divine, the student of ecclesiastical history and antiquities, and the literary amateur. To the Clergy this work will be invaluable; for it will form an universal index to the contents of all similar libraries, and a most useful guide and 'royal road' to all the multifarious subjects which continually occupy their attention."—Church Warder.

"This is a most important undertaking, and one which will render invaluable service to the cause of theological literature, as well as to literature in general. A careful examination of this First Part of Mr. Darling's 'Cyclopædia' convinces us that all the promises of his prospectus will be fulfilled, and even exceeded; and that the work, when complete, will embrace objects, and be marked by excellencies, which are to be found in no other bibliographical compilation. Already has the labour of many years been expended on its preparation; and to ensure throughout the whole the accuracy by which this First Part is characterised, a vast amount of care and labour will be necessary. Here we have under every name of note a brief but carefully-drawn-up biographical sketch of the author; the best editions are mentioned, with the place and date of publication; and in addition to an enumeration of each separate work of the author, a detailed list of the contents of every volume is given, this being so minute as to specify every sermon or theological treatise, or the topic of every separate discussion. For many purposes of reference, the possession of such a catalogue as this will be, when it is complete, tantamount to access to the treasures of a library of many thousands of volumes, containing most that is of value in ancient and modern literature. No public library of any consequence will be without such a treasure; and it is essential to every private collection which has any pretensions to completeness, especially in the literature of theology. We wish that it were in the hands of every minister, and of every member of our theological seminaries."—United Presbyterian Magazine.

"In noticing the commencement of this great and important undertaking, we may express our satisfaction that it has fallen into the hands of Mr. Darling, whose extensive clerical library affords most unusual facilities for its execution. It is designed to supply a want which has been much felt by students in theology of every grade, and especially by preachers and theological writers, who have too often found themselves embarked upon the wide sea of theological literature, without any, or with very inadequate assistance, to guide them to the particular objects of their search. In the two volumes which will compose the 'Cyclopædia Bibliographica,' will be found a complete catalogue of authors and their works, accompanied by brief biographical, and sometimes critical notices. In the first volume the alphabetical order is observed; but the second, of which we have seen a specimen page, will be distinguished by a scientific arrangement of subjects, presenting under each head a connected view of all the books of any authority which have been published with reference to it, and rendered easy of reference by a full alphabetical index. We have looked with some nicety and no little interest through the part which has just been published; and it bears abundant evidence of the great care, patient industry, and sound judgment, with which the work of compilation has been conducted. We may mention the notices of St. Anselm and St. Athanasius, of Dr. Atterbury, Lord Bacon, and Dr. Arnold, with the lists of their works, as highly satisfactory and complete. Enough, indeed, appears to convince us that this will be the most copious, accurate, and well-arranged catalogue of works in theological and general literature which has as yet been published."—Morning Post.

"Those who have been engaged in research on theological or ecclesiastical subjects scarcely need to be informed of the 'Clerical Library,' now designated 'Metropolitan,' an invaluable depository of rare and expensive works. The object of the 'Cyclopædia,' which will be comprehended in two handsome quartos of 1600 pages each, with every advantage of typographical arrangement, and with clear and compact classification, is to enable the student, without the toil of personal inspection, to know the contents of the work that he desires to consult, and to ascertain what works contain the information that he seeks. Here is, in short, the unfolding of a library peculiarly rich in stores of patristic and mediæval literature, while it is also furnished with the leading works in history and general literature. Many other works, also, not actually in the library, are included in this work for the sake of completeness, and marked with an asterisk. The catalogue is novel; but the novelty consists in completeness and clearness of construction, such as deep experience and immense industry seldom combine to yield. It will be, doubtless, a favourite library companion, quite irrespectively of its primary relation to this particular institution, and may be noticed as a boon to the classes whom its compiler contemplates—'authors, preachers, students, and literary men.'"—Wesleyan-Methodist Magazine.

"We have much pleasure in introducing to our readers a catalogue of theological works, on a most comprehensive and novel plan, compiled by Mr. James Darling, the London bookseller. As proprietor of the most extensive and best-selected clerical library in the kingdom, numbering nearly 30,000 volumes, Mr. Darling possesses advantages for the compilation of such a work altogether unequalled. Even with all the appliances within reach, eight years have been expended in the production of the 'Cyclopædia Bibliographica.' A well-digested bibliographical work on theology has been long wanted, and Mr. Darling has been justly considered one of the few men competent to supply the desideratum. Without the facilities afforded by the books being all within his own premises, it would have taken the entire labour of a life-time to have brought a work ranging over such a wide field to completion."—Macphail's Edinburgh Ecclesiastical Journal.

"We can scarcely imagine a more acceptable literary offering to the clerical student, than the invaluable catalogue of theological works just commenced. Such a work will be more than a national one, if fully and successfully carried out—it must obtain universal celebrity. We heartily wish every encouragement may be given to Mr. Darling, that he may vigorously proceed in his noble undertaking."—Essex and West Suffolk Gazette.

"A laborious, a remarkable, and a very useful work, and will be of service to all whose studies lie in the literature of theology."—The Critic.

"If this work is continued with the same care and ability which distinguishes its commencing part, it will prove a valuable assistant to literary men, and will, we think, meet with a cordial reception from them. . . . It is not only a biographical dictionary, but a classified catalogue of an author's works."—Atlas.

"Mr. Darling has just issued the second part of his 'Cyclopædia Bibliographica, a Library Manual,' &c. The labour which Mr. Darling must have bestowed upon this indispensable companion to the library of every theological student must have been very great,—labour which it would have been impossible for him to have accomplished had he not had the materials for its compilation close at hand in his own extensive and valuable library of sacred literature. We trust Mr. Darling will receive the patronage he so well deserves; and that, not only for his own sake, but because we should look upon the discontinuance of the 'Cyclopædia Bibliographica' as a heavy blow and great discouragement to the cause of theological learning."—Notes and Queries.

"Mr. Darling's Metropolitan Library has long maintained a high and increasing character, both for its extent and selectness. At vast cost, and with commendable pains, it has reached its present celebrity; and, both for classical and general purposes, it is the best collection of its kind in the metropolis. The 'Cyclopædia Bibliographica' 'is founded chiefly,' not exclusively, 'on the books contained' in this library. We could have wished that the plan had been a little more extensive; but, from the specimen before us, in the first part, we have reason to believe that the editor will not limit himself to Mr. Darling's library, except where he believes that its provisions are ample for the objects of theological and general literature. Should the work be carried on and completed in the spirit and with the ability displayed in the opening number, it will be a most valuable book to authors and students generally. The plan is excellent. It is not so much a critique upon authors and their works, as an analytical view of the chief topics upon which particular authors have written; by which the student may see, at a glance, how far any subject in which he is interested has been treated by the writers here alphabetically introduced to his notice. We cannot but wish the amplest success to this undertaking. It is quite a desideratum in our literature."—Evangelical Magazine.

"They only who know the great amount of time, of labour, and of capital, which is necessarily expended on a work of this kind, can at all appreciate the difficulties which attend its 'bringing out'—difficulties which can only be surmounted by a due measure of support on the part of those to whom it is principally calculated to render most efficient assistance. We happen to know, from personal experience, that very few men have ever laboured more assiduously, and more thoroughly con amore, in the support and extension of theological literature, than the compiler of the 'Cyclopædia Bibliographica.' His 'Clerical Library' affords the richest material for facilitating the labours and researches of those of the Clergy who cannot otherwise, from a variety of causes, gain access to the standard works of our great Divines — while his 'manual of theological and general literature,' which we are now noticing, will very materially simplify the difficulties of reference."—English Churchman.

"For accuracy and care, Mr. Darling's 'Cyclopædia' is only equalled by the Manual of Brunet: its form and appearance entitle it to rank with our finest bibliographical publications; and for practical utility, we know of none that surpasses or approaches to it."—Brownson's Quarterly Review.

"Here is a valuable book for the modest and laborious,—for here may be seen at a glance, what almost every man has written upon almost every subject in the wide field of Theology. It is a great undertaking to throw open what we may call the 'library of the world,' having first made a catalogue of it. We trust the author may be encouraged in future labours by the large circulation of his book."—Christian Observer.

"Of special value to theological students, this 'Cyclopædia' will also prove an important contribution to general literature."—Literary Gazette.

"Doubtless, the vast labour inseparable from so great a task as a catalogue raisonnée of the extensive range of general literature, is the prime cause of the reading world having yet seen but four or five books with any pretension to the title Bibliographica. Of course the catalogues of national or royal collections have no claim to rank in this class, being, in fact, merely alphabetical, or, at best, classified, catalogues of the library to which they relate. Brunet's Manuel du Libraire, a valuable and accurate work; Lowndes's Bibliographer's Manual, and some of Dibdin's books, are the only attempts of this kind that at the moment suggest themselves to our memory. The present so far excels them all in copiousness, in the theological department especially, as to leave comparison out of the question. On the analytical, bibliographical, and biographical branches of this immense collection, a life-long labour must certainly have been bestowed; nor would even this suffice, unless seconded by peculiar facilities, immense industry, and favourable opportunities. Such a work, from its limited sale, must, to a great extent, remain its producer's sole monument and reward, for pecuniary profit could not keep pace with the time consumed and the toil undergone. Mr. Darling, the publisher, is himself a bibliophile of no mean ardour and extent of information, and his imprimatur is a guarantee that the book is a trustworthy and careful one, did we not find in every page of the Cyclopædia Bibliographica ocular demonstration of as much out-of-the-way learning and diligent research as suffice to convince us that this is an invaluable work, fallen into fit hands for its due completion, to which the patronage of every student, especially clerical, every scholar, every reader of good books, and every buyer of the same, should lend the aid—no heavy tax — of his personal patronage."—Morning Advertiser.

"Mr. Darling's 'Cyclopædia Bibliographica' promises to be a work of great value."—Bibliotheca Sacra and American Biblical Repository.

"The information communicated is much fuller and more complete than is supplied by any previous work; and the principles on which it is arranged, by facilitating reference, greatly subserves the purposes for which such a work is prepared. It is a well-arranged catalogue raisonnée, the skilful execution of which does much honour to the compiler, and will meet the convenience of very many students. In our former notice we expressed a hope that no party bias would be permitted to infect the work; and it is but simple justice to say, that nothing of the kind has yet occurred to us."—Eclectic Review.

"The immense value of this specimen of Mr. Darling's erudition is manifested even more decisively in this part, than in the four numbers which have previously been issued. The manner in which the arrangement is carried out, and the elaborate distinctions which are preserved respecting best editions, and the subjects of rare books, is that of a gentleman who thoroughly understands his business, and desires, with a perfectly unselfish disposition, to afford every means to the scholar and literary man to become as well-informed as himself. No clergyman or antiquarian should think it needless to possess a copy of this work. It will smooth many a day's hard toil, by diminishing the labour of research, pointing, as it does, in an instant to works which it might have taken weeks, if not months, or years, to search after."—Bell's Messenger.

"Our commendation of this 'Cyclopædia' is unreserved. The contents of each book are given in synopsis, with full paginal references to the particular edition, while the completeness of the synopsis itself guides in reference to any other edition. Cross-references assist in relation to each author, whenever necessary. A brief notice of the author, more condensed, but for a searcher in libraries, quite as valuable as will generally be found in the dictionaries, precedes the exhibition of his works. Many books, to be sought in vain in other collections, are found here, and the student who sits at his own table longs for literary material, and yet dreads the toil of going abroad to hunt over libraries, and wade through the British or the Bodleian, may save himself days of work by turning over these clear, rich, and admirably printed pages. The works of St. Augustine, for example, are described synoptically in five pages, double-columned. The fifty-four volumes written, compiled, or collected by the celebrated Jansenist, Antony Arnauld, fill two and a half. The texts and topics of Dr. Arnold's sermons and miscellaneous works are all forthcoming. The recondite and documentary labours of the Assemani are marshalled in full view. Fathers, Papists, Puritans, Tractarians, and Nonconformists, Mediæval Dreamers and Modern Illuminati, stand meekly together, rank and file, labelled with relentless accuracy; and the student, whatever he may chance to be, may at once choose his company, and fix on the intelligence desired. The labour is great, unique, and of public benefit. Success to it!"—Christian Times.

ABAELARD, Peter [or, Abelard, Abaylart, Abeillard, Abulart, Esbaillart, Allebart, Abailard, Bailardus, Abelhardus, &c.]

Born at Le Pallet, near Nantes, 1079; died, 1142. The history of this unfortunate man is now well known. Although not remarkable as an original thinker, yet he was an acute dialectician, and showed unquestionable talent in his quarrels with the Realists and with St. Bernard. "Abælard and his school," says M. Cousin, "represent in some sense the liberal and innovating spirit of the time, with its frequently deceitful promises and the unavoidable mixture of good and evil, of sobriety and extravagance." Abælard's doctrines were condemned in 1140 at the Council of Sens, presided over by Louis VII. King of France.

M. Cousin has collected, in 4to., the unpublished works of this philosopher, 1836. (See Remusat.) An edition of Abælard's complete works, in three 4to. volumes, is now in progress by MM. Cousin, Jourdain, and Despois. The first volume only has yet appeared; it was published in 1849, and contains,—Epistolæ, Heloissæ problemata, Carmina, Sermones per annum, Expositio orationis Dominicæ, Symboli, et Symboli Athanasii, Expositio in Hexameron, Fidei confessio, De Dionysio Areopagita epistola, Contra quemdam canonicum regularem, Invectiva in quemdam ignarum dialectices, Appendix.

Petri Abælardi, philosophi et theologi, abbatis Ruyensis, et Heloisæ conjugis ejus, primæ Paracletensis abbatissæ, Opera, nunc primum edita, ex MSS. codd. v. illust. Francisci Amboesii. Cum ejusdem præfatione apologetica, et censura doctorum Parisiensium. 4°. Par. 1616

ABBADIE, James, D.D., Dean of Killaloe, in Ireland.

A French Proteſtant divine, univerſally eſteemed for the excellence of his character, and one of the moſt eloquent and learned men of the age in which he lived. Born at Nay, in Berne, 1654 (or, according to ſome authorities, 1658). He ſtudied chiefly at Sedan, where he received the degree of Doctor in Theology. At the Revolution he accompanied Marſhal Schomberg to England, and was promoted to the Deanery of Killaloe. Died, in London, 1727.

This work was received with enthuſiaſm immediately on its appearance by Roman Catholics as well as Proteſtants. The beſt critics have agreed in conſidering it one of the moſt perfect of its kind, uniting ſtrength of reaſoning with a lively, pure, and elegant ſtyle. The firſt edition was publiſhed in 1684, the ſecond, much augmented, appeared in 1688.

ACTA Sanctorum quotquot tote orbe coluntur, vel à Catholicis ſcriptoribus celebrantur, quæ ex Latinis et Græcis, aliarumque gentium antiquis monumentis, collegit, digeſſit, notis illuſtravit Joannes Bollandus, Societatis Jeſu theologus, ſervatâ primigeniâ ſcriptorum phraſi. Operam et ſtudium contulit Godefridus Henſchenius, ejuſdem Societatis theologus. 55 vol. folio. Antv. 1643–1845

The moſt remarkable book which has ever been produced, whether it be regarded as to its ſubject-matter, the period of time which has been required for its production, or the indefatigable induſtry, great learning, and untiring reſearch of its authors. In giving the acts and achievements of ſaints, it unfolds the hiſtory of Europe during the middle ages on a more extenſive and minute ſcale than is done in any other production, including at the ſame time much of Eaſtern hiſtory, and containing innumerable important documents and intereſting hiſtorical diſſertations. It throws great light on the early records of Chriſtianity and the practice and diſcipline of the firſt Chriſtians, the origin and progreſs of the monaſtic orders, annals of biſhopricks, and nearly all important events in the Church of all ages. Its production has already occupied above two hundred years, and it is ſtill going on to its completion. Two interruptions have occurred during that period: firſt, when the Jeſuits were ſuppreſſed in 1773, after which the work was reſumed in 1779; and the ſecond, at the period when the French troops entered Belgium, in 1794. It was again reſumed in 1837, and a volume publiſhed in 1845. As one of the great efforts of the Jeſuits, that body has always been able to furniſh the men moſt qualified to continue the gigantic work as one after another has deceaſed. The honour of commencing the undertaking is due to Father Heribert Roſſweide, of Utrecht, born 1569. He made great collections towards it, but died in 1629, before any part was printed. He was ſucceeded in his labours by John Bollandus (born 1596, died 1665), from whoſe name the authors who have been engaged in the work are now called Bollandiſts. Having found his labours accumulate, he aſſociated others with him, one of whom, Daniel Papebroch, continued his labours for fifty years, and brought into contribution an ample private fortune. The names of the authors in their regular ſucceſſion are given in the accompanying enumeration of the contents of the volumes, which are all of the original and beſt editions. The firſt forty-two volumes were reprinted at Venice 1734, finiſhing at 15 Sept. That edition has never been completed, and is in little eſtimation, as, beſides its imperfect ſtate, it is full of errors of the preſs, and is printed in an inferior manner.

ADAMS, Thomas.

A pious and excellent divine, and a writer of great animation of ſtyle, full of bold metaphor and ſtriking alluſions. In 1614 he was "preacher of God's word at Willington, in Bedfordſhire." He afterwards became Rector of St. Bennet's, Paul's Wharf, London, from which he was ſequeſtered for his loyalty in the grand Rebellion, and died before the Reſtoration. Dr. Southey, with whom he was a favourite author, ſaid that he had "all the oddity and the felicity of Fuller's manner."

ADAMSON, Patrick, Archbiſhop of St. Andrews.

One of the moſt learned and moſt elegant writers of the age in which he lived. Born, at Perth, 1543. At the age of twenty-three he went abroad as tutor to a young gentleman. At Bourges he narrowly eſcaped at the time of the maſſacre of Paris. He lived in concealment ſeven months, during which time he tranſlated into Latin verſe the Book of Job, and wrote the tragedy of Herod, alſo in Latin verſe. In 1573 he returned to Scotland, became miniſter of Paiſley, and was ſoon raiſed to the Archbiſhoprick of St. Andrews; the accepting of which brought him into continual trouble, perſecution, and affliction until his death, in great poverty, 1591. His works were printed at London, 1619.

ÆLFRIC, Abp. of Canterbury.

An eminent Anglo-Saxon writer, ſon of a nobleman. Became a Benedictine monk at Abingdon under the abbot Ethelwold, who on being promoted to the ſee of Wincheſter took Ælfric with him to inſtruct the youth in his cathedral. About 989 he was appointed to govern the newly eſtabliſhed abbey of Cerne, Dorſetſhire, where he wrote his homilies. Became biſhop of Wilton, and in 995 archbiſhop of Canterbury. Died, 1006. To Ælfric we are indebted for much of the Anglo-Saxon literature which we poſſeſs; he was a man of very great diligence and learning. There is much confuſion in the biographical accounts of this author. The facts above chiefly reſt on the authority of Wright's "Biographia Britannica."

An eminent ſcholaſtic divine; of the family of the counts of Bollſtaedt; born at Lavingen, in Suabia, in 1193 according to ſome, and according to others in 1205. Studied at Pavia. Entered the Order of Dominicans, 1221. Went to Paris and lectured on Ariſtotle with great reputation. Provincial of the Dominicans in Germany, 1254, and reſided at Cologne. Biſhop of Ratiſbon, 1260. Died, at Cologne, 1280. His pre-eminence over his contemporaries in learning, his extraordinary proficiency and experiments in the mechanical and phyſical ſciences, were ſo wonderful that, like Roger Bacon, he was the ſubject of many legendary ſtories. In divinity he followed Peter Lombard. With him began the ſecond period of the ſcholaſtic philoſophy.

ALLIX, Peter.

Born at Alençon, 1641; died 1717. This learned French divine was ſucceſſively miniſter of the Proteſtant church at Rouen and at Charenton, near Paris. At the revocation of the edict of Nantes he retired to England, where he became canon of Windſor and treaſurer of Salisbury Cathedral. The ſhare he had in the French tranſlation of the Bible, projected by the celebrated Claude, brought unjuſtly upon him an accuſation of Socinianiſm. Allix is conſidered as an eminent Orientaliſt, and as one of the moſt able theologians of his age.

A native of Northamptonſhire. Educated at St. John's College, Cambridge. Ejected from the living of Wilbee, Northamptonſhire, in 1662. Afterwards miniſter of a Diſſenting congregation at Weſtminſter, where he died in 1703, conſiderably advanced in years. His principal work was "Anti-Sozzo" (or Anti-Socinus, Sozzo being the Italian name of Socinus). Hervey has highly commended it, as one of the beſt defences of evangelical doctrines, and an unanſwerable performance. Dr. E. Calamy celebrates it for its wit.

ANASTASIUS BIBLIOTHECARIUS.

So called becauſe he was librarian of the Vatican. A native of Greece, one of the moſt learned men of his age. Flouriſhed in the ninth century. His chief work, Lives of the Popes, ſometimes publiſhed under the title of Liber Pontificalis, has cauſed much controverſy. Blondel and Salmaſius beſtow great encomiums on it, while Halling, a Roman Catholic writer, depreciates it as much. The moſt elaborate edition is that deſcribed below. The work is given by Muratori in his "Script. Rerum Ital." vol. 3, accompanied with diſſertations.

ANSELM, Saint, Biſhop of Canterbury.

Born at Aoſta, in Piedmont, about 1034. Studied under Lanfranc. Became a monk of Bec, 1060, and three years afterwards ſucceeded Lanfranc as prior of Bec. In 1078 he became abbot. Having viſited England, he became ſo greatly reſpected that he was appointed Archbiſhop of Canterbury by William Rufus, and conſecrated 1093. Died 1109. His intellect was of the higheſt order; a more profound and original writer had not appeared in the church ſince the times of St. Auguſtine. He ranks as one of the fathers of the Church. Gerberon publiſhed the firſt good edition of his works in 1675. Reprinted with ſome additions 1721. The beſt is that of 1744.

ANTHONY, Saint [S. Antonius Magnus, Abbas.]

Celebrated as the founder of Monaſticiſm. He was of Egyptian origin, and born 251, of Chriſtian parents. Early in life he gave up his paternal eſtate, which was conſiderable, to the people of his native village, and having ſold his moveable property and diſtributed it to the poor, he retired into ſolitude. At the end of twenty years, A.D. 306, his fame became ſo great that multitudes joined him in his aſcetic life. He died 356, aged 105 years, in great reputation for ſanctity.

AQUINAS, St. Thomas, called the Angelical Doctor.

One of the greateſt of the ſcholaſtic divines. Born in Italy 1224, or, according to ſome authorities, 1226, or 1227. At the age of ſeventeen he entered the Society of Preaching Friars at Naples. In 1244 he went to Paris, and from thence to Cologne, where he attended the lectures of Albertus Magnus. He afterwards returned to Paris, and read lectures on the Book of Sentences with great applauſe. In 1263 he went to Rome, and after teaching divinity in various univerſities, ſettled at Naples, the archbiſhopric of which he refuſed. Died 1274. He had much penetration and perſpicuity of thought and expreſſion; he poſſeſſed a very retentive memory, the faculty of correct inference, and the moſt minute accuracy, hence his great work the Summa Theologiæ is ſtill a ſtandard work. The editions of it are very numerous. The edition of his works generally conſidered the beſt on account of the beauty of its typography is that of Rome, 1570–71, 17 vol. in 18, folio. Other editions, Venice, 1593, 18 vol. folio; Antw. 1612, 19 vol. folio; Par. 1636–41, 23 vol. folio. That deſcribed below has the advantage of poſſeſſing the Diſſertations of De Rubeis. A commentary on the Apocalypſe, and other works, have been attributed to Aquinas, which have not been printed with his collected works.

ſepulchra, ſex libris diſtincta illuſtrantur. 2 vol. in 1. Par. 1659

With numerous copperplates and woodcuts repreſenting the tombs of the early Chriſtians, with their inſcriptions, devices, &c. It is in ſubſtance a Latin tranſlation of the Italian treatiſe, in which Boſio deſcribed his intereſting reſearches in the Roman catacombs, which was completed by Severano; but Aringhi incorporates the reſults of many important diſcoveries made by others.

ARISTEAS.

Held a high place at the court of Ptolemy Philadelphus, King of Egypt. He is ſaid to have been a Jew by birth, and to have had a ſhare in the Septuagint tranſlation. His hiſtory of that tranſlation was conſidered genuine and authentic by the ancient church, but much controverſy aroſe in the ſeventeenth century on that point. It was admitted by I. Voſſius, Walton, Whiſton, Brett, Maſch; but rejected by Van Dale and Hody.

The hiſtory of the ſeventy-two interpreters: of their journey from Jeruſalem to Alexandria, their entertainment at the Egyptian court, their verſion of the Septuagint, with all the circumſtances of that illuſtrious tranſaction. Written in Greek by Ariſteas, embaſſador from Ptolomæus Philadelphus, king of Egypt, to Eleazar, high-prieſt of the Jews.

To which is added,—

The hiſtory of the angels, and their gallantry with the daughters of men, written by Enoch, the Patriarch.

ARNULFUS LEXOVIENSIS, Epiſcopus.

This prelate, celebrated for his attachment to Thomas à Becket, was ſucceſſively treaſurer of the church of Bayeux, Archdeacon of Selz, and Biſhop of Liſieux. Having reſolved to retire into a monaſtery, he became a canon of the Abbey of S. Victor at Paris, where he died in 1182.

The letters of Arnulfus are not devoid of elegance, and they are very intereſting in an hiſtorical point of view.

Although this work is generally known by the title of the Aſſembly's Annotations, the writers were not appointed by the Weſtminſter Aſſembly but by the Parliament. Several of them, however, were members of the Aſſembly. The annotators on the ſeveral books were as follows:—

The Pentateuch—Mr. Ley, Sub-dean of Cheſter.

Kings, Chronicles, Ezra, Neh., Eſther—Dr. Gouge.

Pſalms—Dr. Meric Caſaubon.

Proverbs—Francis Taylor.

Eccleſiaſtes—Biſhop Reynolds.

Solomon's Song—Mr. Smalwood.

Iſaiah, Jeremiah, Lamentations—Gataker.

"Exceeded by no commentators, ancient or modern."

Ezekiel, Daniel, Minor Prophets—Bp. Richardſon.

The Evangeliſts—Mr. Ley.

St. Paul's Epiſtles—Dr. Featley.

"Rather imperfect on account of the author dying before he had reviſed or finiſhed them."

The remaining books are ſuppoſed to have been written by Mr. Downame and Mr. Reading.

ATHANASIUS, Saint, Biſhop of Alexandria.

An eminent Father of the Chriſtian Church of the fourth century. Born in Alexandria of heathen parents. He was early patroniſed by Alexander, Biſhop of Alexandria, who ordained him deacon. On the death of Alexander, in 326, Athanaſius was appointed his ſucceſſor at the age of twenty-eight, as is ſuppoſed. He was a great oppoſer of the Arians, by whoſe influence he was at different times baniſhed, or obliged to hide himſelf in the deſert. He died peaceably at Alexandria in 373. His works chiefly relate to the Arian controverſy, and he is conſidered one of the ableſt ſupporters of the Trinitarian doctrine. The creed attributed to him is ſuppoſed to be ſpurious. By ſome it is aſcribed to Vigilius Tapſenſis. The beſt and moſt complete edition of his works is that of 1777. That of 1698, in 3 vol. folio, is more elegant; but to render it complete it is requiſite to add Montfaucon Collectio Nova, 2 vol. folio. A criticiſm on the edition of 1698 will be found in Nouv. de la Rép. des Lettres, 12. 243, 450, and 669.

AUGUSTINE, Saint.

One of the moſt learned and illuſtrious of the Fathers of the Church. Born, at Tagaſta, 354. His early years were ſpent in profligacy, but having gone out of curioſity, when at Milan, to hear the ſermons of St. Ambroſe, the prayers of his mother Monica were at length rewarded by his converſion, and he was baptized by St. Ambroſe, 387. Having returned to Tagaſta, he diſtributed his poſſeſſions to the poor, and lived in community with ſome friends. Ordained prieſt, 391; Biſhop of Hippo, 395; died, at Hippo, 430. His works, particularly the City of God, and thoſe in defence of the grace of Jeſus Chriſt, have gained him immortal honour: they diſcover a vaſt extent of genius, great accuracy and penetration, accompanied with much force and energy. The beſt edition is that of the Benedictines, 1679–1700, which has been reprinted, with additions, at Venice, in folio and 4°.; at Baſſano, 1807; and at Paris, 1836–39.

BACON, Francis, Baron of Verulam, Viſcount of St. Albans, and High Chancellor of England in the reign of King James I.

One of the moſt illuſtrious philoſophers which England has produced. Born, in London, 1561; died, at Highgate, London, 1626. Good editions of his works have been publiſhed in 3 vol. folio, 5 vol. 4°., and 10 vol. 8°. The beſt and moſt complete is that deſcribed below, edited by Baſil Montagu, Eſq. It contains tranſlations, as well as the original, of the Latin works; and is illuſtrated by portraits, views, and fac-ſimiles; with a new life of Lord Bacon, by the editor. An article on it will be found in the Edinburgh Review, 65. 1.

BACON, Roger.

A monk of the Franciſcan order. Born near Ilchester, Somerſetſhire, 1214. Died 1292, or 1294. He was the moſt extraordinary man of his time: a perfect maſter of Latin, Greek, and Hebrew; in all branches of the mathematics well verſed, admirably well ſkilled in geography, aſtronomy, chemiſtry, and other ſciences; all of which he made ſubſervient to the ſtudy of theology. His great knowledge was often aſcribed to magic, and owing to the bigotry of the age he ſuffered a ten years' impriſonment.

A work of great and deſerved popularity in the ſeventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

BAILLET (Adrian).

Born 1649; died 1706; received his education in the College of Beauvais. After having taken holy orders, and ſerved for a ſhort time as a pariſh prieſt, he was appointed librarian to the Attorney-general, Lamoignon. The great work (Jugemens des Savans) on which Baillet's reputation chiefly reſts was never finiſhed. It is full of intereſting particulars, but has been moſt violently criticiſed by Ménage and other authors, who thought themſelves unfairly dealt with in Baillet's animadverſions. Beſt edition, 1725.

BALGUY, Thomas, D.D., Archdeacon and Prebendary of Wincheſter.

Born 1716, died 1795. Son of the preceding. Admitted of St. John's College, Cambridge, about 1732. He owed his preferments to Biſhop Hoadley, from whoſe latitudinarian principles, however, he appears to have departed more widely than his father. He was a ſincere and exemplary Chriſtian, a ſound and accurate ſcholar, a ſtrenuous and able defender of the Chriſtian religion and of the Church of England.

Diſcourſes on various ſubjects, and charges delivered to the clergy of the Archdeaconry of Wincheſter, to which are added ſeveral never before publiſhed: with advice to an unmarried lady. Edited by the Rev. James Drake, M.A. 2 vol. 8°. Camb. 1822

BALZAC (John Louis Guez, de).

Born at Angoulême, in France, 1594; died 1655. Was one of the beſt writers of that period which preceded, in French literature, the brilliant era of Louis XIV. He, however, ſpoilt his ſtyle by extreme mannerism; and it is only in his devotional works that he riſes to ſimplicity.

His Œuvres Diverſes were printed by the Elzevirs, 1651, 1658, and 1664, in ſmall 12°; and his Œuvres were publiſhed in 2 vol. folio, Paris, 1665.

Politics, in ſelect diſcourſes of Monſieur Balzac. Which he called his Ariſtippus, or wiſe ſcholar. Done into Engliſh by Baſil Kennet, Fellow Cor. Ch. Coll. Oxford. To which are added an advertiſement of the tranſlation, and an account of the life and writings of the author. 8°. Lond. 1709

BALUZE, Stephen.

Born, at Sulle, 1631; died 1718. The extenſive learning of Baluze, his talent as an hiſtorian and a canoniſt, recommended him to the notice of M. de Marca, Archbiſhop of Paris; Chancellor le Tellier; and the miniſter Colbert. In 1670, he was named Profeſſor of Canon Law in the Royal College at Paris; and in 1693 he had been honoured by a penſion from Government on account of his work on the Popes of Avignon, when his attachment to the Cardinal de Bouillon brought him into diſgrace. Baluze was obliged to reſide ſucceſſively at Lyons, Rouen, Tours, and Orleans: ultimately he obtained leave to return to Paris, but he never recovered the preferments which he had formerly enjoyed. He edited ſome good editions of the Fathers. His Miſcellanea, 4 vol. folio, 1761, and Capitularia regum Francorum, 2 vol. folio, 1780, are much eſteemed.

Nova collectio conciliorum, tomus primus. Fol. All that has been publiſhed. Par. 1683

BAMPTON LECTURES.

Founded by the Rev. John Bampton, M.A., Canon of Saliſbury. Born at Saliſbury, 1689. Admitted a commoner of Trin. Coll. Oxf. 1705–6; M.A. 1712. Died, 1751, aged 61. The will appoints that a lecturer ſhall be choſen upon the firſt Tueſday in Eaſter term by the heads of colleges in Oxford, to preach eight Divinity Lecture Sermons the year following at St. Mary's, between the commencement of the laſt month in Lent term and the end of the third week in Act term, upon either of the following ſubjects,—To confirm and eſtabliſh the Chriſtian faith, and to confute all heretics and ſchiſmatics; Upon the divine authority of the Holy Scriptures; Upon the authority of the writings of the primitive Fathers as to the faith and practice of the primitive Church; Upon the divinity of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt; Upon the divinity of the Holy Ghoſt; upon the articles of the Chriſtian faith, as comprehended in the Apoſtles' and Nicene Creeds. Thirty copies of the ſermons to be printed within two months after they are preached. When the Lectures were commenced in 1780, the income of the eſtate left for this foundation was 120*l.* per annum. For the contents of each volume more in detail ſee under each author. BARONIUS SORANUS, Cæsar, Cardinal of the Roman Church.

Born at Sora, Naples, 1538; entered the Congregation of the Oratory, 1560; elected ſuperior of his Order, 1593; advanced to the dignity of cardinal, 1596. He was alſo appointed Librarian to the Roman See. Died 1607. He was a man of ſincere religion, probity, learning, and extenſive reading. He left a wonderful monument of induſtry and reſearch in his Eccleſiaſtical Annals, which will ever perpetuate his memory. In order to oppoſe the Centuriators of Magdeburg, he undertook this work at the age of thirty, and laboured for thirty years in collecting and digeſting the materials for it. In the edition deſcribed below, which is the beſt, the criticiſms upon the work by Pagi, in which he rectifies a great number of miſtakes, both in chronology and facts, are placed at the bottom of each page to which they refer. The continuation by Raynaldus is the moſt extenſive: it was compiled from the Vatican archives, and has in it many original papers. That by Spondanus is well executed, and extends to the year 1646. See SPONDANUS.

BARROW, Isaac, D.D.

One of the moſt eminent of Engliſh divines, and a diſtinguiſhed mathematician. Born in London 1630. Educated at the Charter-houſe. Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, 1649. He was the firſt Lucaſian lecturer in mathematics at Cambridge, 1663, and was ſucceeded by Sir Iſaac Newton 1669. Appointed maſter of Trinity College, 1672. Died in London 1677. His matter is ſo full and ample that his ſermons form complete diſſertations, exhauſting every ſubject on which they treat.

The firſt edition of his theological works was publiſhed in 1685, edited by Archbiſhop Tillotſon, 3 vol. folio; a fourth was added in 1687, containing the Opuſcula. This latter volume was not printed with any of the folio editions that followed, the laſt of which, publiſhed in 1741, is the moſt elegantly printed. The edition in 8 vol. 8°. the contents of which are given below, is the beſt hitherto printed. Two other editions contain the Opuſcula, one edited by the Rev. T. S. Hughes, 7 vol. 8°., but the greater part of Barrow's learned quotations are moſt unaccountably, and without notice, omitted in it; that edited by Hamilton, in 3 vol. 8°. is complete and correctly printed, though the type is ſmall.

The firſt volume was publiſhed in the lifetime of Edmund Burke, who has given the following teſtimony regarding it:—"The whole of the wonderful narrative is ſupported by documents and proofs, with the moſt juridical regularity and exactneſs. The reflections and reaſonings are interſperſed with infinite judgment, and in their moſt proper places, for leading the ſentiments of the reader and preventing the force of plauſible objections. The tendency of the whole is admirable in every point of view, political, religious, and philoſophical." See Preface v.

BASIL [BASILIUS], St., ſurnamed the Great.

One of the moſt eloquent of the Fathers of the Church. Born at Cæſarea, in Cappadocia, 326; ſtudied, under the famous Libanius, at Antioch and Conſtantinople; went to Athens, where he met with Gregory Nazianzen, with whom he had a very cordial intimacy; retired to his native country, and taught rhetoric, 355; became a monk; chosen successor to Eusebius, bishop of Cæsarea, 370; died 379. He wrote with great elegance and purity: his style is majestic, his reasonings profound, and his erudition extensive. The best edition of his works is the Benedictine, 3 vol. folio, 1722–30. That described below is an excellent reprint of it, with additions.

Opera omnia quæ exstant, vel quæ ejus nomine circumferuntur ad MSS. Codices Gallicanos, Vaticanos, Florentinos, et Anglicos, necnon ad antiquiores editiones castigata, multis aucta: nova interpretatione, criticis præfationibus, notis, variis lectionibus illustrata, nova S. Doctoris vita et copiosissimis indicibus locupletata. Gr. et Lat. opera et studio Domini Juliani Garnier, Monachi Benedictini, editio Parisina, altera emendata et aucta. 3 vol. in 6. Par. 1839

BASIL [BASILIUS], Bishop of Seleucia.

Flouriſhed A.D. 448. In the time of Eutyches he fell into the error of denying the two natures in Chriſt; but at the Council of Chalcedon he came over to the orthodox faith. In his Orations he generally keeps to the literal interpretation of the particular points he takes in hand, and illuſtrates them with an exuberance of ornament.

BATHER, Edward, M.A., Archd. of Salop.

Died 1847, in his 68th year. Studied at Oriel College, Oxford. Vicar of Meole Brace, 1804. Became archdeacon of Salop and prebendary of Lichfield. In all the duties of his office he was moſt diligent and faithful; as a preacher he was powerful and convincing, ſhowing great perſpicuity of conception in his diſcourſes, which, though perhaps not deeply learned, yet diſplayed a bold and maſculine train of ſound argument, that impreſſed his hearers with the truth of the matter diſcuſſed, and with ſuch cogency and clearneſs that they became as it were imperceptibly identified with the ſubject, and were led to believe that his reaſoning was ſuch that could not be avoided. A very favourable review of his ſermons will be found in the Britiſh Critic, 3. 164. Beſides the 3 vol. of ſermons, he publiſhed 14 charges and ſome ſeparate ſermons. Alſo, Hints on Catechiſing. Second edition. Sm. 8vo. 1849.

BAXTER, Andrew.

Born at Old Aberdeen, 1686 or 1687, and educated at King's College there; died 1750. His principal employment was that of a private tutor to young gentlemen. He was a very ingenious metaphyſician and natural philoſopher. Biſhop Warburton has characteriſed his Treatiſe on the Soul as "containing the juſteſt and moſt preciſe notions of God and the ſoul, and as altogether one of the moſt finiſhed of its kind." The beſt edition is that of 1745.

An enquiry into the nature of the human ſoul; wherein the immateriality of the ſoul is evinced from the principles of reaſon and philoſophy. Third edition. With a complete index. 2 vol. 8°. Lond. 1745

Matho; or, the coſmotheoria puerilis: a dialogue, in which the firſt principles of philoſophy and aſtronomy are accommodated to the capacity of young perſons, or ſuch as have no tincture of theſe ſciences. Hence the principles of natural religion are deduced. Tranſlated and enlarged by the author. [Anonymous.] 2 vol. 8°. Lond. 1740

A third edition, corrected and enlarged, was publiſhed, in 1765, 2 vol. 12°.

A letter to John Wilkes, Eſq. Pp. 12. 12°. 1753

BAXTER, Richard.

An eminent Nonconformiſt divine. Born 1615. He was unlucky in his education by falling into the hands of ignorant ſchoolmaſters; neither had he the advantage of academical ſtudy; but he had the uſe of an excellent library, with which he endeavoured to ſupply the deficiency. Received orders 1638; became miniſter at Kidderminſter, 1640. At the Reſtoration he was appointed one of the king's chaplains, and was offered the biſhopric of Hereford, which he declined. Not being allowed to continue at Kidderminſter, he ſettled in London. Although he did not conform, he attended the pariſh churches. Died 1691. His theological ſyſtem has been called Baxterianiſm; it holds a middle way between Calviniſm and Arminianiſm. He was a man of great piety, zeal, and ſimplicity, with a moving and pathetical way of writing. His induſtry was great, having publiſhed 168 diſtinct treatiſes, and few have ever written to better purpoſe. Dr. Barrow affirmed that his practical writings were never mended, and his controverſial ones ſeldom confuted. According to Dr. Bates, they contain a treaſure of controverſial, caſuiſtical, poſitive, and practical divinity. An eſſay on Baxter, by Sir James Stephens, will be found in the Edinburgh Review, 70, 181, and among that author's Eſſays, 2. 1. Baxter's Practical Works were collected and publiſhed in 4 vol. folio, 1707. Reprinted in 23 vol. 8°. 1830; alſo, in 4 vol. imperial 8°. His controverſial and other works have never been collected, and moſt of them are very ſcarce; a complete liſt is here given immediately after that of the practical works in chronological order.

BAYLE, Peter.

Born 1647, died 1706. An eminent philoſopher and critic. Born a Proteſtant, he for a while changed to the Roman Catholic religion, but ſoon abandoned it. In 1675 he became profeſſor of philoſophy at Sedan, and ſix years afterwards at Rotterdam. This laſt poſt, however, he was deprived of by the calumnies of Jurieu.

Bayle revived academic ſcepticiſm. "He was," ſays Voltaire, "the firſt of logicians and of ſceptics. His greateſt enemies muſt confeſs that there is not a line in his works which contains an open aſperſion of Chriſtianity; but his warmeſt apologiſts muſt acknowledge, that there is not a page in his controverſial writings which does not lead the reader to doubt, and often to ſcepticiſm."

BEDE, or BEDA, ſtyled the Venerable.

One of the moſt eminent Fathers of the Engliſh Church; born 672; embraced the monaſtic life, and devoted himſelf to ſtudy, and writing his Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory and other works; died 735. There are three editions of his works, each in 8 vol. folio, 1563, 1612, and 1688. Dr. Giles has edited with great care (1843) all that he conſiders genuine of ſuch as are contained in the former editions, with ſome works added which are not to be found in them. The contents of both the editions of 1688 and of 1843 are given below. The beſt edition of the Hiſtory in Anglo-Saxon and Latin is that of 1722, folio.

BELLARMINE, Robert, Card. of the Rom. Ch.

Born, in Tuſcany, 1542; admitted of the Society of the Jeſuits, 1560; ordained prieſt, 1569, and taught divinity at Louvain; removed to Rome, and read lectures on points of controverſy with much applauſe; Legate to France, 1590; created Cardinal, 1599; Archbiſhop of Capua, 1602; died 1621. He was one of the greateſt controverſial writers of his time: his great work, De Controverſiis, has occaſioned numerous anſwers; and it may be conſidered the ſtandard work in defence of the Roman Church. Originally publiſhed at Ingolſtadt, 1587, 88, and 89, 3 vol. folio, with alterations; diſapproved by the author, who reviſed and publiſhed it again at Venice; but this was full of errors, from the negligence of the printer. In 1607, he publiſhed at Rome a volume of corrections, under the title of Recognitio Librorum, which was copied into the editions of 1615 and 1620, and incorporated in thoſe of Paris 1688, and Prague 1721. The work has been reprinted at Rome, 1832–40, in 4 vol. 4°, with Appendix Monumentorum Eccleſiaſticorum ad Quæſtiones Polemicas, de recentioribus erroribus perquam utilis. The beſt and moſt complete edition of the whole works is that of 1620, deſcribed below. There is another printed at Venice, 1721–27, which is often called the beſt; but, although a finely-printed book, ſeveral of Bellarmine's works are omitted in it.

BERGIER, Nicolas Sylvester, Canon of Notre Dame, Paris.

Born 1718, died 1790. An able and pious writer. In all his works there is a logical arrangement and preciſion which well qualified him for being the ſtrenuous oppoſer of the modern philoſophers of France. Yet this did not prevent them from engaging him to write the Dictionary of Theology for the Encyclopédie Méthodique, but there was ſome guile in this, as it ſerved as a cloak for the infidelity inſinuated in other parts of the work.

Church, and the great oppoſer of the rationaliſtic tendencies of Abelard and his ſchool. By his auſtere way of living, his learning, eloquence, and piety, he became the moſt influential expounder of religious doctrine during the 12th century. He was a practical antagoniſt of ſcholaſticiſm. Luther ſays, "If there ever has been a pious monk who feared God, it was S. Bernard; whom alone I hold in much higher eſteem than all other monks and prieſts throughout the globe."

The Benedictine edition of his works, Paris, 1690, 2 vol. folio, is much eſteemed. Reprinted, with additions, 2 vol. folio, Paris, 1719. This edition was followed in that of 1839, deſcribed below.

BERRIMAN, John.

Born 1689; educated at St. Edmund Hall, Oxford; became Curate of St. Swithin, and Lecturer of St. Mary, Aldermanbury, London; Rector of St. Alban's, Wood Street, 1744; died 1768.

Θεὸς ἐφανερώθη ἐν σαρκί; or, a critical diſſertation upon 1 Tim. 3. 16; wherein rules are laid down to diſtinguiſh, in various readings, which is genuine, an account is given of above a hundred Greek manuſcripts of St. Paul's epiſtles, &c., and the common reading of that text, "God was manifeſt in the fleſh," is proved to be the true one. Being the ſubſtance of eight ſermons, preached at the Lady Moyer's lecture, in the years 1737 & 1738. 8°. Lond. 1741

BERRIMAN, William, D.D.

Brother of the above; born, in London, 1688; entered Oriel College, Oxford, when ſeventeen; became Curate of Allhallows, Thames Street, and Lecturer of St. Michael's, Queenhithe, London; collated to the living of St. Andrew-Underſhaft, 1722, to which was joined a fellowſhip in Eton College, 1727; died 1749. By great aſſiduity he acquired conſiderable critical ſkill in the Greek, Hebrew, Chaldee, Arabic, and Syriac languages. In the interpretation of the Scriptures, he endeavoured to explain them by the rules of grammar, criticiſm, logic, and the analogy of faith. The articles of doctrine and diſcipline which he drew from the ſacred writings he traced through the primitive Church, and confirmed by the evidence of the Fathers and Councils. His ſermons are grave, weighty, and uſeful; but belong to a claſs which have never been eminently popular.

An hiſtorical account of the controverſies that have been in the Church concerning the doctrine of the holy and ever bleſſed Trinity. In eight ſermons [on Deut. 32. 7], preached in the years 1723 and 1724, at the lecture founded by the worthy Lady Moyer, deceaſed. 8°. Lond. 1725

BERRUYER, Isaac Joseph.

Born 1681; died 1758. A celebrated writer among the Jeſuits. An affected ſtyle, witticiſms very often bordering upon the abſurd, opinions almoſt heterodox, and expreſſions which are ſometimes indelicate—eſpecially in the firſt edition, 1728—cauſed his hiſtory to be condemned by Pope Clement XIII. The whole was reprinted at Beſançon, 1828–29, in 11 vol. 8°., with the condemned paſſages omitted.

BEVERIDGE, William, D.D., Bp. of St. Asaph.

Born 1636, at Barrow, in Leicestershire, of which parish his grandfather, father, and brother were successively vicars. Admitted of St. John's College, Cambridge, at sixteen. At eighteen he wrote his book, De Linguarum Orientalium Necessitate. Vicar of Ealing, Middlesex, about 1660. Rector of St. Peter's, Cornhill, London, 1672. Bishop of St. Asaph, 1704. Died 1708. He has been styled "the great reviver and restorer of primitive piety;" he was a man of extensive and almost universal learning, furnished to a very eminent degree with all useful knowledge. His sermons are distinguished for gravity and simplicity, plainness and solemnity of style. His theological works were for the first time collected and edited by the Rev. T. H. Horne, 9 vol. 8°. 1824. Since that edition was published the MS. of the Exposition of the last nine of the Thirty-nine Articles, which was wanting in that and all former editions of that book, was discovered, and edited by Dr. Routh. The Anglo-Catholic Library edition of the works is complete in that respect, and it contains some of the bishop's Latin works. The contents are as follows:—

Biblia ſacra Polyglotta, complectentia textus originales, Hebraicum, cum Pentateucho Samaritano, Chaldaicum, Græcum, Verſionumque antiquarum Samaritanæ, Græcæ LXXII. interp. Chaldaicæ, Syriacæ, Arabicæ, Æthiopicæ, Perſicæ, Vulg. Lat. quicquid comparari poterat. Cum textuum et verſionum orientalium tranſlationibus Latinis. Ex vetuſtiſſimis MSS. undique conquiſtis, optimiſque exemplaribus impreſſis, ſumma fide collatis [&c.], cum apparatu, appendicibus, tabulis, variis lectionibus, annotationibus, indicibus, &c., opus in ſex tomos tributum. Edidit Brianus Waltonus, S.T.D. 6 vol. fol. Lond. 1657

This is the moſt complete, correct, and uſeful, of all the Polyglott Bibles. Nine languages are given in it, although there is no one book printed in ſo many. Biſhop Walton was aſſiſted by Dr. Edmund Caſtell, Dr. Thomas Hyde, Dr. Pocock, Dr. Lightfoot, Mr. Alexander Huiſh, Mr. Samuel Clarke, Louis de Dieu, and other eminently learned men. The whole was printed in four years, having been commenced in 1653 and finiſhed in 1657. The work was encouraged by Oliver Cromwell, and by his permiſſion the paper on which it was printed was imported duty free; the Protector was, therefore, mentioned with peculiar reſpect at page 10 in the preface; but, at the Reſtoration, that paſſage was cancelled in all the remaining copies, the two laſt leaves being ſuppreſſed, and three others ſubſtituted, containing that and other alterations fitted to the change of times. From this has ariſen the diſtinction of republican and loyal copies, the latter being the moſt numerous. Some copies have been diſcovered containing a dedication to King Charles II. The Lexicon, by Caſtell, is a neceſſary accompaniment. See Castell. The Paraphraſis Chaldaica, publiſhed by Wilkins, is conſidered a uſeful addition. See Wilkins. Dr. John Owen ſeverely attacked Dr. Walton chiefly on the ground that various readings unſettled the integrity of the ſacred text, but was ably anſwered by Walton. See Owen, John, Conſiderations; and Walton, The Conſiderator Conſidered. The Apparatus is reprinted ſeparately. See Walton.

The above three volumes form the Roman Catholic authoriſed Engliſh tranſlation of the Bible, from which ſucceeding editions are printed. The Old Teſtament was printed for the firſt time in 1609; the New Teſtament originally appeared at Rheims in 1582. The tranſlation of both was made by Gregory Martin, aſſiſted by the famous Cardinal Allen and Richard Briſtow; the notes to the Old Teſtament were by Dr. Worthington, thoſe to the New by Briſtow. The tranſlation and annotations of the New Teſtament have been animadverted upon at great length by Dr. Fulke and T. Cartwright. See under their names.

under great diſadvantages, diſcover a prodigious fund of reading, eſpecially in the Fathers, united with great judgment, ſincerity, and candour. It remains to the preſent day the text-book on the important ſubjects on which it treats. It was originally publiſhed in 10 vol. 8°, 1710–22; and the whole works appeared in 1726 in 2 vol. folio. They were tranſlated into Latin, with the words of the quotations given, by Griſchovius, in 10 vol. 4°. Halæ, 1724–29; and again in 1751. The author left MS. corrections, which were incorporated in an edition edited by his great-grandſon, in 8 vol. 8°. 1829. Two editions have ſince that date appeared under the able editorſhip of the Rev. J. R. Pitman, in which the paſſages referred to are given in the original words. The hiſtory of the Acts of the holy Apoſtles, confirmed from other authors, and conſidered as full evidence of the truth of Chriſtianity. With a prefatory diſcourſe upon the nature of that evidence. 8°. Oxf. 1840

This work demonſtrates inconteſtably the truth of Chriſtianity. It forms the ſubſtance of Sermons delivered in the years 1736, 1737, and 1738, at the Boyle Lecture, and originally publiſhed 1742, in 2 vol. 8°.

BISHOPS (anonymous books on).

The divine or apoſtolical inſtitution, and power of juriſdiction of that ſacred order of men in the Church now called Biſhops, fully proved from Scripture, Fathers, and the fundamental laws of this realm; wherein every objection of the Diſſenters is confuted. With the ſentiments of the moſt learned foreigners on ſeparation, and their expreſs cenſure of the Diſſenters. By a Preſbyter of the Church of England. 8°. Lond. 1721

The character of a primitive biſhop, in a letter to a Nonjuror. Wherein is contained, 1. A vindication of the preſent Church of England in poſſeſſion; 2. A juſtification of the late conduct of the deprived biſhops; 3. An examination of the new hypotheſis of keeping up the ſeparation; 4. Many arguments for a return to the public communion. 8°. Lond. 1709

The manner of the impeachment of the twelve biſhops accuſed of high treaſon, for preferring a petition, and making a proteſtation, to the ſubverting the fundamentall laws and being of parliaments. Whereunto is added the ſaid petition and remonſtrance of the ſaid biſhops. Ff. 4. 4°. Lond. 1642

A letter out of the country, to a member of this preſent parliament: occaſioned by a late letter to a member of the Houſe of Commons, concerning the biſhops lately in the Tower, and now under ſuſpenſion. Pp. 20. 4°. Lond. 1689

The ſameneſs of biſhops and preſbyters, as to order, tho' not as to dignity, no leſs briefly than clearly proved: and likewiſe, that laymen are as eſſentially the church as clergymen; having as much authority to declare the traditions of the church, and conſequently to determine controverſies. With a defence of univerſities againſt the pope and biſhops, &c. in a letter from a doctor of the Sorbonne to the biſhop of Autun. Tranſlated from the French. Ff. 5, pp. 34. 8°. Lond. 1717

The manner of proceeding againſt biſhops, for high-treaſon and other capital offences. With an impartial inquiry into the rights and privileges as to peerage, and their judicature in parliament in caſes of tryals. And alſo a brief hiſtory of the moſt remarkable tryals of biſhops to this time. Pp. 68. 8°. Lond. 1722

BLAIR, James, M.A.

A most exemplary clergyman, unwearied in the labours of the ministry. Born and educated in Scotland. Ordained and beneficed in the episcopal church there. Near the end of the reign of King Charles II. he quitted his preferments owing to the unsettled state of affairs in Scotland. Sent out as missionary to Virginia by Compton, Bp. of London, about 1685. Appointed commissary over the Church there 1689. By great exertion he erected a college, over which he was appointed president, in which he continued near fifty years. He was also Rector of Williamsburg, in Virginia. Died 1743. His sermons form a valuable treasure of sound divinity and practical Christianity. They were reprinted in 1740, in 4 vol. 8°, with a recommendatory preface by Dr. Waterland, and two copious indexes.

Undeſigned coincidences in the writings both of the Old and New Teſtament an argument of their veracity. With an appendix, containing undeſigned coincidences between the Goſpels and Acts and Joſephus. Third edition. 8°. Lond. 1850

The above includes a republication of the three following works:—
The veracity of the books of Moſes.
The veracity of the hiſtorical Scriptures of the Old Teſtament. [Hulſean Lectures.]
The veracity of the Goſpels and Acts.

The whole were re-arranged, corrected, and enlarged as a ſecond edition in 1847. The third edition, 1850, is a reprint of the ſecond, with a few corrections.

BODIN, John.

Born 1530; died 1596. A celebrated French lawyer; born in the province of Anjou. Was accuſed of being an infidel from his having compoſed a work in which the principles of Chriſtianity are criticiſed. The following treatiſe, now conſidered Bodin's ſtandard production, has been ably analyſed by Mr. Hallam. Cujas, who diſliked Bodin, made on his name the anagram, Andius ſine bono. Profeſſor Dugald Stewart compares the Angevin lawyer to Lord Bacon, and ſays that "in his refined combinations of hiſtorical facts he has more than once ſtruck into a train of ſpeculation, bearing a ſtrong reſemblance to that afterwards purſued by Monteſquieu."

BOETHIUS, Anitius Manilius Severinus.

The most learned, and almost the only Latin, philosopher of his time. Born, at Rome, 455. Studied at Athens during 18 years. Made consul 487. An excellent magistrate and statesman; after faithfully and assiduously fulfilling the duties of his high station with great honour, he became obnoxious to King Theodoric for his opposition to Arianism, and he was beheaded, 526. His Consolation of Philosophy has always been admired both for the style and sentiments. His topics of consolation are deduced chiefly from the tenets of Plato, Zeno, and Aristotle, which has led to his being considered more a Stoic than a Christian.

Born at Dijon, 1627; died 1704. Has been called the "Eagle of Meaux," and "The laſt of the Fathers of the Church." After having ſpent at Metz the earlier part of his eccleſiaſtical career, he was invited to Paris; preached before the king, and obtained, in 1669, without any ſolicitation, the biſhopric of Condom. But being appointed, in 1670, governor to the dauphin, he reſigned his biſhopric that he might devote himſelf more entirely to this important office. When he had completed the education of the prince, Louis XIV. advanced him, as a recompenſe for his attention and fidelity, to the ſee of Meaux. He was alſo made a counſellor of ſtate, 1697, and an almoner of the BOURDALOUE, Louis.

Born, at Bourges, 1632; died 1704. Has been termed "the moſt Janſeniſt of all the Jeſuits." The reputation which he acquired by his preaching in the country induced his ſuperiors to ſend him to Paris, where he ſoon became popular. The character of his eloquence is cloſeneſs of reaſoning, perſpicuity of ſtyle, and great faithfulneſs. Bourdaloue was the favourite preacher of Louis XIV. The Abbé Maury celebrates eſpecially the firſt parts of his ſermons on The Conception, The Paſſion, and The Reſurrection. Among the editions of his ſermons may be noticed, 16 vol. 8°. Par. 1706–34, finely printed; 18 vol. 12°. Par. 1709, alſo 1716; 17 vol. 8°. Par. 1822–26, the handſomeſt of modern editions; 3 vol. large 8°. Par. Didot, 1840. There are numerous others.

Sermons, nouvelle édition, exactement revue et corrigée. 15 vol. 12°. à Liege, 1784

BOWER, Archibald.

Born at Dundee, Scotland, 1686. Educated at the Scots' College, Douay, after which he went to Rome and became a Jeſuit. Came to England 1726, and ſoon after joined the Church of England. Re-admitted among the Jeſuits about 1744, and again became a Proteſtant. Died 1766. His Lives of the Popes are written in a ſtrain very hoſtile to the Roman Catholic Church. The vacillating and time-ſerving character of the author has injured the character of the work, but it contains the moſt copious account of the Popes in the Engliſh language. He had a conſiderable ſhare in writing the Univerſal Hiſtory, and was editor of the Hiſtoria Literaria, publiſhed monthly.

He alſo publiſhed the Trial and Triumph of Faith.

BRADSHAW, William, an eminent Puritan divine.

Born at Market-Boſworth, Leiceſterſhire, 1571. Admitted into Emmanuel College, Cambridge, 1589. Became miniſter of Chatham, Kent, 1601, but, refuſing to ſubſcribe, he was ſuſpended. Afterwards he was choſen lecturer of Chriſt Church, Newgate Street, London. Died 1618. Biſhop Hall ſays of him, that he was "of a ſtrong brain and of a free ſpirit, ſuffering himſelf for the ſmall differences of judgment to be alienated from his friends, to whom, notwithſtanding his ſeeming auſterity, he was very pleaſing in converſation, being full of witty and harmleſs urbanity, and of digeſted and excellent notions."

A preparation to the receiving of Chriſt's body and bloud, directing weake Chriſtians how they may receive the ſame. 7th edition, enlarged. 24°. Lond. 1627

BROUGHTON, Hugh.

Born at Oldbury, Salop, 1549. He was ſent to Cambridge by the celebrated Bernard Gilpin, where he became fellow of Chriſt's College. Went to London, where he diſtinguiſhed himſelf as a preacher. In 1589 he went to Germany, where he continued until the death of Queen Elizabeth. Preached before Prince Henry on the Lord's Prayer, 1603. Died 1612. He attained great reputation for extenſive knowledge in Hebrew and Rabbinical learning, but he was deficient in taſte and judgment. Dr. Lightfoot has left a high eulogium on his character and attainments.

The works of the great Albionean divine, renowned in many nations for rare ſkill in Salem's and Athens' tongues, and familiar acquaintance with all Rabbinical learning, Mr. Hugh Broughton. Collected into one volume and digeſted into four tomes. Folio.

BROWN, John, Min. at Haddington, Scotland.

Born at Kerpoo, Perthſhire, 1722. He was entirely ſelf-taught: by great perſeverance he acquired a conſiderable knowledge of Latin and Greek; with Hebrew he became critically converſant. He could alſo read and tranſlate the French, Italian, German, Arabic, Perſian, Syriac, and Ethiopic; but all theſe were ſubordinate to his favourite ſtudy of divinity, in which he became eminently ſkilled, as well as in hiſtory, both eccleſiaſtical and civil. He paſſed a long life as Profeſſor of Divinity to the Seceſſion Church of Scotland, and miniſter of a large congregation at Haddington. Died 1787. All his works are much eſteemed, eſpecially his Self-Interpreting Bible, which has gone through many editions.

BROWNE, Sir Thomas.

Born in London 1605. Educated at Winchester School. Entered Broadgate-hall, Oxford. On taking his degree of M.A. he turned his attention to phyſic, and practiſed for ſome time in Oxfordſhire. Went abroad, and on his return ſettled at Norwich, where he had a very extenſive practice. Knighted 1671. Died 1682. His Religio Medici was firſt publiſhed ſurreptitiouſly in 1642, and was annotated upon by Sir K. Digby; after which the author publiſhed a more correct edition, which was ſucceeded by many others, the beſt of which is dated 1733. Good editions have been recently printed. His Book on Vulgar Errors was originally publiſhed in 1646 in 4°. A ſixth with improvements appeared in 1673, folio. His works were publiſhed in one volume, folio, 1686, and again in 1836 very much enlarged, 4 vol. 8°., an article on which will be found in the Edinburgh Review, 64. 1. They are now reprinting by Mr. Bohn in his Antiquarian Library. Dr. Johnſon, who has paſſed a high eulogium on his writings, ſays that there is ſcarce any kind of knowledge, profane or ſacred, abſtruſe or elegant, which he does not appear to have cultivated with ſucceſs.

BULLINGER, Henry. One of the Reformers.

Born, at Bremgarten, Switzerland, 1504. Educated first at Emmeric and then at Cologne, where he applied to divinity and the canon law. After teaching some time at a Cistercian abbey, he began to propagate the doctrines of the Reformation. Succeeded Zuinglius as pastor at Zurich 1531. Died 1575. He was of moderate principles and endeavoured to effect a union between the Lutherans and Calvinists. Many of his works were translated into English, and so great was their reputation that Abp. Whitgift obtained an order in full convocation that every clergyman should procure a copy of his sermons and read one of them once a-week.

BUNYAN, John.

Born at Elſtow, Bedfordſhire, 1628. After learning to read and write, he followed his father's buſineſs of a travelling tinker. Led a diſſolute life for ſome time, but was at length converted, and began to ſtudy the Holy Scriptures, in which he acquired a great knowledge. Served in the Parliament army. Became a member of a Baptiſt congregation at Bedford, about 1655, to whom he occaſionally preached, for which, at the Reſtoration, he was confined in Bedford gaol twelve years and a half. It was here that he wrote his Pilgrim's Progreſs, one of the moſt original and popular books in the Engliſh language. On being releaſed he became teacher of the Baptiſt congregation at Bedford. Died in London, 1688. His works have been printed in 2 vol. folio, 1692 and 1767, and 6 vol. 8°. Edin. 1771, and Lond. 1784.

BURNETT, Andrew, M.A.

Sermon, Micah, 7. 15–17. [Thankſgiving.] 4°. 1696

BURNET, Gilbert, Biſhop of Saliſbury.

Born at Edinburgh, 1643. Educated at Aberdeen. Went over to Holland 1663, where he ſtudied Hebrew under a learned Jew. Preſented to the living of Saltoun 1665. Profeſſor of divinity in the Univerſity of Glaſgow 1669. Became Chaplain to the King, preacher at the Rolls, and lecturer of St. Clement's, London, 1673. Attended on Lord Ruſſell at his execution, after which, being deprived of his preferments, he travelled into France and Italy. Accompanied the Prince of Orange to England, and was conſecrated Biſhop of Saliſbury 1689. Died 1714–15. He was an induſtrious, learned, and great divine. The veracity of his Hiſtory of His Own Time has been called in queſtion, but, as it now appears, with little foundation. In the recent Clarendon Preſs edition numerous ſuppreſſed paſſages have been reſtored. A complete liſt of his very numerous works will be found in the edition of 1753 and ſubſequent editions.

BURNET, Thomas, LL.D., Maſter of the Charter-houſe.

A learned and eloquent writer. Born at Croft, Yorkſhire, 1635. Entered Clare Hall, Cambridge, 1651; removed to Chriſt's College 1654; Fellow 1657; Maſter of the Charter-houſe 1685; died 1715. The philoſophy of his Theory of the Earth has not been much approved, but the work has been greatly celebrated for the eloquence of its ſtyle and grandeur of its imagery. In that and his work De ſtatu mortuorum, he maintains the doctrine of the millennium, and in the latter, the limited duration of future puniſhment.

BURTON, Robert.

Born at Lindley, 1576. Admitted of Braſenoſe College, Oxford, 1593. Elected a ſtudent of Chriſt Church 1599. Vicar of St. Thomas, Oxford, 1616; he was alſo preſented to the Rectory of Segrave, Leiceſterſhire. Died 1639–40. He was a general ſcholar, and ſevere ſtudent, of a melancholy yet humorous diſpoſition, and of extenſive learning. His Anatomy of Melancholy was firſt publiſhed in 4°., and afterwards in folio. The 6th edition, folio, 1651–52, was printed from a copy corrected, with conſiderable additions, by the author. There are ſeveral modern editions in 2 vols.; and one volume, 8°.: in a recent edition in the latter form, publiſhed by Tegg and Co., tranſlations are given of the numerous claſſical extracts. It is a ſtorehouſe of learning on all kinds of ſubjects, intermingled with quaint obſervations and witty illuſtrations. Some of the beſt paſſages in Sterne are literally copied from it without acknowledgment.

The anatomy of melancholy; what it is, with all the kinds, cauſes, ſymptoms, prognoſtics, and ſeveral cures of it. In three partitions, with their ſeveral ſections, members, and ſubſections, philoſophically, medicinally, hiſtorically opened and cut up. By Democritus, junior; to which is prefixed, A ſatyrical preface, conducing to the following diſcourſe. Sixteenth edition; printed from the authoriſed copy of 1651; with the author's laſt corrections, additions, &c. 8°. Lond. 1836

BURTON, Robert.

An aſſumed name by the author of a numerous collection of popular chap-books. The original publiſher was Nathaniel Crouch, who is ſaid by Dunton to have been the author.

BURY, Arthur, D.D.

Born in Devonſhire, and educated at Exeter College, Oxford, from which he was ejected, 1648, by the parliamentary viſitor, after a reſidence of ten years. At the Reſtoration he was made Prebendary of Exeter, Rector of Exeter College, and chaplain to Charles II. Having, in his Naked Goſpel, defended the principles of the Socinians, he was ejected from his preferment, and his book burnt by order of the Univerſity of Oxford. Died at Exeter about the end of the 17th century.

The conſtant communicant, a diatribe, proving that conſtancy in receiving the Lord's Supper is the indiſpenſable duty of every Chriſtian. 8°. Oxf. 1681

BYZANTINE HISTORIES.

The hiſtorians of the Eaſtern empire from the foundation of Conſtantinople, A.D. 330, until the taking of that city by the Turks, 1453. They contain a prodigious collection of curious facts, and innumerable illuſtrations of manners, cuſtoms, and uſages, with much valuable information reſpecting the commerce and ſtatiſtics of the middle ages. They were originally publiſhed at various dates during the 17th century in large folio volumes, beautifully printed. The edition deſcribed below is a reprint of the greater part of them in folios of a more commodious form. An edition in 8°. was commenced at Bonne in 1828, and is ſtill in courſe of publication. Above forty-eight vols. have been iſſued. An article on the Byzantine Hiſtorians will be found in the Edin. Rev. 50. 85.

CALAMY, Benjamin, D.D.

Son of Edmund Calamy, miniſter of Aldermanbury. From St. Paul's School he was ſent when very young to Cambridge and entered Catherine Hall 1664–5. Became a fellow of his college and a very eminent tutor there. Miniſter of St. Mary Aldermanbury 1677. Vicar of St. Lawrence, Jewry, with St. Magdalen, Milk Street, annexed. Prebendary of St. Paul's 1683. Died 1686. He was a man equally valuable for the abilities which he poſſeſſed, and the uſes to which he applied them; greatly attached to the Church of England and very intent on gaining over Diſſenters to her communion. His ſermons are ſtill valuable as well for the beauty of their language as the excellent ſentiments contained in them.

Some conſiderations about the caſe of ſcandal, or giving offence to weak brethren. Ibid. 2. 39

No performance of its kind or ſize ever gained more credit to its author, or was taken more notice of by the public than this ſermon. It was attacked by the zealous Nonconformiſt, De Laune, in ſuch a way as to draw upon himſelf a fatal impriſonment.

CALAMY, Edmund, Miniſter of St. Mary Aldermanbury.

An eminent Nonconformiſt divine, born, at London, 1600; admitted of Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, 1616. His decided Calviniſm prevented his being elected a fellow of his college. Preſented to the living of St. Mary's, in Swaffham Prior, Cambridgeſhire, which he reſigned 1626, on being appointed one of the Lecturers of St. Edmund's Bury; Rector of Rochfort, Eſſex, ten years afterwards; choſen miniſter of St. Mary Aldermanbury 1639; he was one of the writers of Smectymnvvs, 1640, and was a diſtinguiſhed member of the Aſſembly of Divines for learning and moderation; promoted the reſtoration of King Charles II.; he refuſed a biſhopric; ejected 1662; died 1666.

CALASIO, Mario de.

So called from a ſmall town in Abruzzo, where he was born, 1550. Entered while yet a youth, in the Franciſcan order. After devoting himſelf with extraordinary diligence to the ſtudy of Hebrew he was appointed by Paul V. Profeſſor of that language at Rome. Died 1620.

Concordantiæ Bibliorum Hebraicorum, in quibus Chaldaicæ etiam librorum Eſdræ et Danielis ſuo loco inſeruntur. 4 vol. Folio. Romæ, 1621

The expenſes of this valuable work were defrayed by Paul V. and Gregory XV. Beſides the Hebrew words in the Bible which are in the body of the book with the Latin verſion over againſt them, there are in the margin the differences between the Septuagint verſion and the Vulgate; ſo that at one view may be ſeen where the three Bibles agree and where they differ; and at the beginning of every article there is a kind of vocabulary, giving the ſignification of each Hebrew word, and affording an opportunity of comparing it with the Syriac, Arabic, and Chaldee. A new edition was publiſhed at London, 1747, 4 vol. folio, edited by Romaine; but it is not conſidered ſo accurate as the original edition, 1621.

CALVIN, John.

A reformer, who ſurpaſſed almoſt all his contemporaries in laborious application, conſtancy of mind, force of eloquence, and extent of genius. Born at Noyon, in Picardy, 1509. Educated at Paris with a view to the Church, but became diſſatisfied with the tenets of the Church of Rome and ſtudied the law. Choſen one of the miniſters of Geneva, and Profeſſor of Divinity 1536. Died 1564. As a commentator on Scripture he ſtands in the firſt rank. Biſhop Horſley, who has left a high eulogium of him, ſays that in the ſtudy of the Scriptures Calvin was one that he moſt frequently conſulted. His Inſtitutes are a model of exact compoſition and elegant latinity. The beſt printed edition of his Latin works is that of Amſt. 1671. 9 vol. folio. The whole of the Latin Commentaries have been either already publiſhed or are in courſe of publication in Engliſh by the Calvin Tranſlation Society, with the exception of the Homiliæ in I. librum Samuelis, and Conciones in Jobum, which are not intended to be compriſed in the ſeries. Of the latter an old Engliſh tranſlation is extant. In addition to the Latin commentaries, and forming quite diſtinct works, the ſermons of Calvin on the following books of Scripture have been publiſhed in French, and tranſlated into Engliſh,—Deuteronomy, folio, 1583; Galatians, 1574; Epheſians, 4°, 1577; Timothy and Titus, 4°, 1579. They are all of very rare occurrence.

Born 1515; died 1563. Or, Caſtellio, his family name was Châteillon. He had been brought into notice at Geneva by Calvin; when, having been found to entertain views which were not in accordance with thoſe of the reformer, he was driven from the city, and obliged to ſeek refuge at Bâle; here he alſo got into diſgrace, in conſequence of his oppoſition to the perſecuting of heretics. Caſtalio ſeems to have been a Socinian. As a tranſlator of the Bible, he is accuſed of being "too much affected, and deſtitute of the noble ſimplicity, grandeur, and energy which diſtinguiſh the ſacred originals."

CASTELL, Edmund, D.D.

Born at Hatley, Cambridgeſhire, 1606. Educated at Emanuel College, Cambridge, from which he removed to St. John's. Chaplain to the king, and Arabic Profeſſor, 1666; to which was added a prebend of Canterbury, &c. His laſt preferment was Higham Gobion, Bedfordſhire, where he died 1685. In him we have a remarkable example of great learning, united with literary generoſity and induſtry. His Lexicon coſt him eighteen years of ſuch aſſiduous labour that he injured his health, and impaired his conſtitution. It alſo ruined his fortune, for he ſpent upon it upwards of 12,000*l.*, and when publiſhed, the copies lay almoſt entirely unſold upon his hands. He alſo greatly aſſiſted Dr. Walton in his Polyglott Bible without remuneration; and ſpent 1000*l.* upon that work.

CASTRO, Alphonsus de.

A Franciſcan friar, and a very celebrated preacher. Born at Zemora in Spain. He accompanied Philip II. into England. Promoted to the archbiſhopric of Compoſtella; but before the neceſſary documents were received, he died at Bruſſels 1558, aged ſixty-three. His work againſt hereſies, which is partly hiſtorical, and partly polemical, has acquired great celebrity. In the firſt edition, 1534, a paſſage occurs againſt the infallibility of the Pope, which the author was forced to ſoften in ſubſequent editions. The lateſt reviſed edition by the author was that of 1556. Beſt edition of his works, 1773.

CHAMIER, Daniel.

Conſidered by Bayle as one of the brighteſt ornaments of the Proteſtant Church. According to Varillas, he had a great ſhare in the drawing up of the edict of Nantes. Chamier was named in 1612 Profeſſor of Divinity at Montauban, and during the ſiege of that town by Louis XIII., in 1621, he was killed by a cannon-ſhot. Chamier's erudition is remarkable, but he is too often harſh and prejudiced in his controverſial writings.

CHRYSOSTOM, Saint John, Archbiſhop of Conſtantinople.

Born at Antioch 354. Studied rhetoric under Libanius.

Embraced Christianity, and was ordained a reader in the Church of Antioch. Entered upon a monastic life, and lived four years in the desert. Returned to Antioch, and ordained deacon 381. Five years afterwards ordained priest. Chosen Bishop of Constantinople 397. Died in exile 407. He was one of the most distinguished and eloquent of the Greek Fathers, copious, smooth, and pathetic. It was from his eloquence that he was surnamed Chrysostomus, or Golden Mouth. The edition of his works in Greek, edited by Saville, at Eton, 1613, 8 vol. folio, was the first good edition. That in Gr. and Lat., by Montfaucon, 13 vol. folio, 1718–38, is the best. It has been well reprinted at Venice 1734 and 1755, also in 13 vol. folio; and Paris, 1837. The latter contains additions.

Opera omnia quæ exstant, vel quæ ejus nomine circumferuntur, ad MSS. codices Gallicanos, Vaticanos, Anglicanos, Germanicosque; nec non ad Savilianam et Frontonianam editiones castigata, innumeris aucta; nova interpretatione ubi opus erat, præfationibus, monitis, notis, variis lectionibus illustrata; nova sancti doctoris vita, appendicibus, onomastico, et copiosissimis indicibus locupletata. Gr. et Lat. Studio D. Bernardi de Montfaucon, monachi Ordinis S. Benedicti, editio Parisina altera aucta. 13 vol. Imp. 8°. Par. 1837
